THE PATH TO PAN AM/PARAPAN AM LEGACY

A Hurdle to Success: Symposium

University of Toronto Scarborough

Saturday, September 27, 2014 – 9:00am to 4:00pm

The second instalment of the Hurdle to Success series – a free full-day symposium bringing together student athletes, community members, sport professionals and academics to discuss critical issues in the experiences of Indigenous and racialized minority students engaged in post-secondary athletics – will take place on Saturday, September 27th at the University of Toronto Scarborough from 9:00am to 4:00pm.

The symposium will feature keynote presentations and panel discussions from community members, academics and sport professionals including renowned social and political activist, and former Olympian, Waneek Horn-Miller, and Paul Jones, Sportscaster for the Toronto Raptors. Breakout discussion sessions throughout the day will explore challenges and opportunities in three areas:

- How Indigenous and racialized minority youth access and are recruited to post-secondary athletics;
- How marginalized student athletes successfully pursue, complete, and graduate post-secondary education; and
- The successful transition to professional sport including Pan Am/Parapan Am.

Children and youth will also have the opportunity to participate in physical activity in the afternoon. Required equipment: Running shoes or sneakers; dressed for physical activity and a water bottle.

A Hurdle to Success is a panel discussion series taking place between 2014 and 2015, in light of the upcoming 2015 Pan Am/Parapan Am Games in Toronto. Presented by the University of Toronto's Anti-Racism & Cultural Diversity Office, First Nations House, the Faculty of Kinesiology & Physical Education, Hart House, the University of Toronto Scarborough, the Centre for Sport Policy Studies and the 2015 Pan Am/Parapan Am Ignite Initiatives; the series explores the relationship between indigeneity, race, sports and post-secondary education.

Join us as we continue the conversation exploring success in sports and school!
